Abstract

In recent years, we see a great change from grid computing to cloud computing. Cloud computing is among the most popular words in computing today. As technology foundation, virtualization technology (VT) becomes a re-emerging technology for recently years. It is a decoupling technique that separating system software from hardware platform, while making applications to run pervasively. Many academic institutes and research lab from industries has devoted great research efforts in various aspects. In 2007, Chinese Ministry of Science and Technology initialize a basic research project (973 project) with 6 universities and 2 research institutes on virtualization technology for computing system in many topics, such as architecture design philosophy of virtualization technology, VT design for single computing system, VT design for multiple computing systems, user environment for VT, security, reliability and trust issue related to VT, and performance evaluation and benchmarking for computing system with VT. In this talk, we will give insight for this project. Our experiences on VT research are discussed in detail, including power management, virtual machine live migration, memory/IO virtualization, and desktop virtualization.

Plenary Speech: The Origination and Protection of Unique Internet Services

Speaker: Prof. Hengjin Cai, Wuhan University, China

Location: 5th floor, East Lake Hall in Ramada Plaza Optics Valley Hotel, Wuhan

Abstract

In this fast moving Internet era, business competition is fiercer than ever. New technologies make it easier to enter a new market. A good idea can blossom into a successful business in a very short period of time. How to come up with a good business idea, protect it from copycats, and then build around it a great business? We will look into some amazing stories in the last two decades. We will also share our own experience in Imagine Cup Competitions sponsored by Microsoft this year.

Good ideas are usually inspired by daily necessities, originated from meeting practical needs. The needs of bookmarking growing websites lead to the creation of Yahoo. PPLive was created by a Chinese student desiring to share soccer videos of 2002 World Cup among classmates. Mark Zuckerberg initially created a rating website just for fun. The website allowed fellow students to choose the "hotter" person from each pair of photos of Harvard students. He expanded the website into a study tool for Art History students to share notes. He launched Thefacebook on February 4, 2004. Facebook evolved into what we know today as the world's most popular social networking website.

The protection of business ideas is a much complicated issue. Even the Justices in the Supreme Court of the United States had hard time making their decisions. However, intangible creative business ideas need to be protected in order to encourage creativity, competition and investment. The general trend is to make business methods to be patentable. This trend is illustrated in a number of high profile lawsuits in the United States.

Priceline filed lawsuit against Microsoft Expedia in 1999. The case was settled in 2001 with Expedia paying Priceline royalties for the use of price matches in reverse auctions. Amazon.com won the lawsuit over BarnesandNoble.com for the violation of patented "one-click" technology. As a new comer, Netflix sued Blockbuster, the established name in the movie rental business, for copying its methods of DVD rental over the Internet. A large portion, 30 percent, of eBay's business used "Buy it Now" feature in its online auction site. MercExchange owned the patent of "Buy it Now" and sued eBay for patent infringement. After six years of litigation, the two companies reached a settlement and MercExchange assigned the patterns to eBay for an undisclosed amount.

In re Bilski concluded on June 28, 2010, even though the Supreme Court rejected the invention claims of hedging against the risk of price changes, the majority opinion was, however, that the machine-or-transformation test should not be the only tool in determining patent eligibility, which leaved the doors open for patent protections of electronic commerce as well as data processing.

The Information Age is still in early dawn as machines have not learnt all cognitive tricks of human beings. The emerging cloud computing is providing a service business platform of even less technological and investment frictions. Insightful ideas with rightful protections have opportunities to thrive in facilitating a great business.
